

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. Charles Nordhoff's "Cape Cod and all Above Shore," first published in 1868, reappears in "Franklin Square Library."

Nashville, Tennessee, is to have a public library. Thanks to the generosity of a citizen, Mr. Sam'l Watson, who has made a gift of $130,000 to start the enterprise.

For a year San Francisco has maintained a public reading library of 5,000 volumes. Twenty thousand new volumes have been added, and the institution has been reopened as a free circulating library.

The richly illustrated papers on Colorado contributed by A. E. Hayes, Jr., Editor of The Bear, to "Harper's Magazine," have been gathered into a book bearing the title of "New Colorado," and the imprint of the publishers of the magazine.

One hundred and twenty thousand copies were published of the "Midsummer Scriber," twelve thousand of those formed the English edition, which two years ago was only 3,000. A Berlin firm has applied for a German edition. There is a French as well as an English edition of "St. Nicholas."

The sixth volume of the Geoffrey Crayon Edition of Irving's works will be "Granda," which is nearly ready at G. P. Putnam's Sons. Mr. R. Swain Gifford furnishes the etching, a Spanish subject, from the frontispiece. This is the first American set of standard books in which the new process of multiplying etchings has been used.

Professor Sheldon Amos, late of the University of London, and an English barrister, must possess unlimited faith in human nature and a philanthropic heart, for he has written an earnest book on "Political and Legal Remedies for War," which Harper & Brothers are publishing. The author does not believe that war is a necessary evil, and sees in the progress of civilization no way but to find a more recognized economic factor than the evidence, and the reason of increasing harmony between nations.

It was a surprise to Frederick von Bodenstein, the German poet, who sailed for home on Thursday, to find that Jean Paul Richter was much read in this country, and still spoken of as a living influence in German literature. He had fallen into undeserved neglect in Germany, and was very little read, his fame passing the limits of his having once been the extreme fashion. Speaking of the American poets, Herr Bodenstein said Fred Hartt was on the top way of popularity in Germany. His poems offered something out of the usual way to Germans who cared little for the American "poets of the schools," since they had enough of their own.

There is another side to the De Lesses drama scheme, on which light has been thrown by Dr. G. Balston Boydall, of Baltimore. He has written a pamphlet advocating the building of the canal because of the hygienic benefits it would confer on the lunged, liver-contracted, sputum-wracked inhabitants of the isthmus. He writes: "When the throughout has passed from sea to sea, an immense volume of strongly impregnated salt water will pass through the isthmus, and a current of salt sea air will follow the water. Thus a grand system of local drainage will be established, and the malaria will be entirely purged. When this theory is extended to the Panama Indians there ought to be a 'boom' in canal stock."
